PRIORITIES

One of the greatest struggles we humans have is that of priorities. How we prioritise our time, how we prioritise our money, how we prioritise our relationships. Often we are asked to prioritise between something good, and something better – that is very difficult. Even prioritising between something good and something bad can be a challenge because of a wildcard unique to us... addictions... especially our addiction to comfort.

Another problematic addiction is our desire for the praise, approval, and acceptance of others. But this is something that shouldn't even rate a second's thought. Our priority should be the approval of God. "We must direct minds to Jesus, not seeking praise or honour of men, but committing ourselves to Him who judgeth righteously" SM 1:73.

The one thing all the great men and women of the Bible had in common, the one thing all the martyrs and Reformers had in common, was their desire to please and obey God no matter the opinions of men. Wouldn't it be wonderful to one day have our names read out besides Moses, Elijah, and Paul, from the Lamb's Book of Life?! We can, but first we need to get our priorities sorted out...

"But seek first his kingdom and his righteousness, and all these things will be given to you as well" Matthew 6:33.
